

Laura Paesano is a young research associate at the Department of Chemistry, Life Sciences and Environmental Sustainability of the University of Parma. She recently holds a PhD in Biotechnology at the University of Parma. Her professional work is focused on molecular-cell biology with specific expertise in the development and exploitation of genomic assays to study stress response induced by nanomaterials in human cell lines.